London firefighters are entering into interest arbitration to hammer out a new contract. But critics complain that arbitration is biased in favour of workers and is sapping city revenues. MIKE DONACHIE/METRO

Arbitration
under fireStalemate. Contract negotiations start for firefighters amid tough times for city budgetsSCOTT
TAYLOR

scott.taylor@metronews.ca

Coun. Denise Brown wants her opinion of firefighters clearly understood."I have a lot of respect for firefighters," said the head of the community and protective services committee. "But there's got to be a point of affordability for the city and we're at the stage where it's almost not affordable for emergency services."Thursday kicked off the first day of interest arbitration between the city and its firefighters, who have been working without a contract since Dec.
31, 2010. While a new contract will be decided, it will almost certainly leave a bad taste in the mouths of many, including that of Mayor Joe Fontana, a vocal opponent of arbitration.Fontana couldn't immediately be reached for comment.Arbitration is one of the hottest of hot-button issues for municipalities across the province because it has helped to spike
the pay of emergency-services

What is arbitration?

- Essential services, such as police, firefighters and paramedics, don't have the option to strike.
- An arbitrator imposes a binding decision only after all other avenues have been exhausted.
- Both sides have to agree on an arbitrator. If they can't, then one is appointed.

- Like a judge in a courtroom, the arbitrator hears both sides and makes a decision.
- The cost of arbitration is evenly split by both sides.

workers, to the dismay of cash-strapped cities.Interest arbitration settles contract disputes for emergency-service workers after negotiations over a new collective-bargaining agreement reach a stalemate. The intention is to ensure fair outcomes for employees who cannot strike.
Many believe those outcomes are overly fair to the workers."I wish they would come to the table and look at it from our point of view," Brown said, as she travelled home from the Association of Municipalities
Ontario conference in Ottawa, where this subject was discussed in depth."I don't know how we get away from it. I think it's something we need to look at and to work with the fire department and the police services to try to come up with a compromise. Ihave respect for them, but it's just not affordable anymore."A release from the City of London stated as much. "Historically, our fire employees have received economic increases that have outpaced inflation and those received by other (city) employee groups," it said. "The (city) believes that Londoners cannot continue to sustain these increases. We believe the fire-department contract needs to balance the interests of taxpayers and our fire employees while reflecting the current state of the economy."Overall, there were about 100 firefighters on the so-called Sunshine List last year. The annual list shows how many Ontario public-sector employees earned at least $100,000."We have no choice over that," Brown said. "That's what arbitration is all about."

Storybook Gardens looks for its happy ending

Theme park. New buildings, characters for popular city attraction

mike.donachie@metronews.ca

It hasn't always been a fairy tale. Storybook Gardens, London's long-established and much-loved family attraction, has had its share of controversy.

Once upon a time it was a little rough around the edges, with some of its parts needing updating, but on Thursday its staff were grinning like the Cheshire Cat as they cut the ribbon for an expanded children's village.

With free entry for kids thanks to vehicle-history reports company CarProof, there were large crowds to see the five new play buildings near the old woman's shoe. That's the old woman who had so many children ... oh, you know the story.

New this year are a bank, animal hospital, fire station, market and fairy's house, each with its own occupant, played by park staff in costume, to interact with the children.

"We want the community to recognize that we are moving forward and we are looking for opportunities to make improvements to our facility," said Storybook Gardens supervisor Diana Rowe.

The five new houses cost $15,000 each, she said, with the animal hospital paid for by Sears, and the hope is to find more companies to support additions to the park. Future plans include a trick-or-treat trail for Halloween.

"We are definitely looking to try and connect with other places in the community to help us expand it quicker," added Rowe, who said poor weather had hit attendance this summer, but August has been busy.

Around the park, the children were happy and that meant their parents were happy, too.

"We come here every year. The kids love it," said Kathie Avola. "It's a good investment for the kids and the future."

New school. Fanshawe ventures into safety

Public safety is the focus of a new school to be opened at Fanshawe College.

The college's new venture will bring together six public-safety programs, all with the same theme, and link up with community partners.

Titled simply the School of Public Safety, it will open in September and lead to the college launching seven to 10 new program offerings by September 2015, Fanshawe said.

The partners involved include local and regional police, fire and paramedic services, community-service agencies, Western University, the Ontario court system, the animal-care community, experts on the prevention of violence against women and children, the City of London, and the Ministry of Community Safety and Correctional Services. METRO

PC leadership

All Ford is saying is give Tim a chance

Ontario's Progressive Conservatives should rally behind Tim Hudak and defeat the Liberal government instead of questioning his leadership, the mayor of Canada's largest city said on Thursday.

"You gotta give him a chance, and I don't think you need to review his leadership," Toronto Mayor Rob Ford said at a swearing-in ceremony for his former deputy mayor, Doug Holyday, as the new PC member for the riding of Etobicoke-Lakeshore.

Hudak has recently come under pressure to allow a leadership review from several Tories who say they're unhappy the party won only one of five byelections held on Aug. 1.

"If you look at the five byelections, we went up in every single one of them, and we won one," Ford said.

Conservatives who are pushing for a leadership review should concentrate on ways to defeat the minority government, Ford added.

"If you look at the Liberal scandals, the corruption that's going on at eHealth and Ornge and everything, it's overwhelming what the governing Liberals have put the taxpayers through," he said.

"Either vote NDP or Conservative, but you can't condone this Liberal behaviour."

Hudak said he would not agree to change the rules to allow a leadership vote at a Tory policy conference next month, noting he got 78 per cent support in the mandatory review that followed the party's loss in the 2011 election.

"I've been asked to lead this party to win the next election ... and that's the job I'm going to do," he said.

Holyday was the first Conservative elected provincially in Toronto since 1999, and Hudak said he'd rather focus on that historic breakthrough and let party officials deal with a motion that asks for a leadership review in September.

"There's a party process for this," he said. "My focus is get the province back on track, getting good jobs back, that's what I'm sticking to."

Theatre school puts students through paces

It could be called the triple-training academy — five intense days for a small group of theatre-loving high-school students to be tutored in dancing, acting and singing.

It's the fifth year in a row for the Grand Academy program, one of many initiatives London's Grand Theatre puts on to expose young people to theatre.

"The first day they showed us around, and it's really cool. They have all these rooms and costumes and shoes and hats," said Giulia Gigante, 13, who currently has her heart set on acting in New York City.

It's not just another summer camp and it's definitely not for kids with stage fright. In just five days, each student prepares a monologue and dance number with professional theatre coaches.

"You get to work with these young people who are really passionate. They walk in and they go: 'This is going to be work, but it's going to be amazing in the end,'" said Rick Kish, the program's singing instructor.

The eight students in the program are practising for the end-of-week showcase, when they audition and get feedback from the theatre's own artistic director.

Grants, scholarships.
Hundreds of thousands go to young people building a better region

SCOTT

scott.taylor@metronews.ca

Young people in the London area are getting a strong financial leg up thanks to nearly half-a-million dollars in scholarships and grants from Libro Financial Group.

In all, 10 students were awarded Community Builder scholarships worth $30,000 each, while 17 local young people playing important roles in community-development projects received a total of $444,356 in grants.

The leader of one London-based organization that received $40,000 said the money will make a tangible difference.

Andrew Fleet, executive director of Growing Chefs Ontario, said the five-year-old organization is starting up a program called The Beet, designed to help teens hone their cooking skills and enter the culinary workforce.

"We do cooking classes with young people, and a few of them become very good and find they are interested in pursuing a career in culinary, but they don't have that foot in the door or anything on their resumé," he said.

The young people involved in the program are encouraged to take ownership of what they do.

"They'll be doing the planning, the marketing for it and the delivery as well," Fleet said. "We don't even know what it's going to really look like yet."

So far, the students have catered the July opening of the Libro branch at Col. Talbot and Southdale roads. About 400 people attended.

"We had five youth there.... That's the kind of thing The Beet is looking to do. They want to be a food-service provider of some sort."

The funds now ensure that there will be a program in the future for those kids.

Money well spent

"By supporting youth and their passion for community, we hope to foster confident young leaders who will continue to contribute (to) and build a vibrant region."

Kelly McEachen, the chair of Libro's community-investment advisory panel

Community scholarships

The scholarships were awarded to youth from the ages of 17 to 25 who demonstrated exceptional commitment to community in a leadership role, had steady academic performance and were enrolled in post-secondary education. $30,000 went to the following Londoners:

- Rushi Gandhi, Rachel Boere, James Neal-Ellis, Emily Nunez, Michael Rosehart.

Community grants

Grants were awarded to initiatives or projects that provide youth an opportunity to develop leadership skills. The following people were the lead youth representatives involved in the project:

- Anna Carroll, The Beet, $40,000; Matt Ross, Sustainability and Capacity Building, $94,726; Behn Strople, El Sistema Aeolian, $30,000; Crystal Kyabaggu, Developing Next Generation of Entrepreneurs & Business Leaders, $10,000.

Tips for servers? Make it an old-fashioned Restaurant biz.

London servers would reject New York-style tipping ban

MARK
london@metronews.ca

Will tipping your restaurant server soon be a thing of the past?

In New York City there is an upscale sushi restaurant — Thomas Keller's Per Se — that is taking the first step into the realm of no tipping.

The restaurant's owner, Jay Porter, has told his clientele that they will no longer need to pay a gratuity as Porter has increased the wages of his serving staff.

Here in London, servers want no part of it.

"I'll take the current setup hands down," said Kelly McVicar, who works as a server at La Casa Ristorante on King Street and is experienced at managing restaurants in London.

"In England, Ireland and other countries (serving) is a position you go to school for.

Quoted

"Restaurants that take away tipping and pay their staff a higher wage will have to charge more to cover the cost."

Waitress Kelly McVicar

Scott Sanderson and Kelly McVicar are two London restaurant staffers who believe the current tip setup is best for patrons and staff alike. HALEY RITCHIE/FOR METRO

You study mixology, you take different courses to be a five-star server. It is a career move in itself.

"Here you can do the position without a formal education, and it gives people without the formal education an opportunity to earn a decent living.

Which is exactly what Porter did at his New York location, raising the menu prices by roughly 15 per cent to cover increased labour costs.

A higher meal tab is not the only change McVicar believes restaurant patrons would see.

"I think that if you take away tipping, you are going to eliminate some of the best servers you are ever going to have," said McVicar.

It's a point her La Casa colleague, chef Scott Sanderson, agrees with.

"If everyone is working for the same wage, you are going to have some people who will not hustle as much, and service would go down," Sanderson said.

Garth White, president of the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association in Toronto, added: "You also have to consider that if you increase a server's wage, then both they and the restaurant will have to pay more in payroll taxes."

White said that food costs still remain the most important expense that restaurants have to control and that often a percentage of the tips servers receive go back toward the entire "team" that contributes to patrons' experience.

"Many servers, especially here in London, do this as a way to get through school. Then we realize at the end of our education we are good at it and enjoy it more than what we may have studied for in university," said McVicar, who, when not in London, works as a teacher in South Korea.

"When I am in London, this is my career," she said.

London outrage at Russia

LGBT campaigner joins calls for Winter Olympics acceptance

Outrage at anti-gay legislation in Russia has sparked fires of its own with plenty of anger in London and a Canadian petition demanding LGBT acceptance during the 2014 Olympics.

The Gold Medal Message campaign is petitioning athletes to emblazon rainbow pins on their uniforms during the opening ceremonies at the Sochi Olympic Winter Games in defiance of Russia's stance.

"It's a backwards law," said Lori Ward, a co-facilitator for Parents and Friends for Gays and Lesbians in London.

"So any sign that shows the human race stands in acceptance of the LGBT community is helpful. I absolutely would sign a petition like that. We're talking about basic human rights here. We're saying no to hate."

Since July 25, the petition started by Winnipeg native Dayne Moyer has already garnered 28,000 signatures and support from New Zealand speed-skater Blake Skjellerup, who himself is gay and training in Winnipeg.

The International Olympic Committee stresses that athletes shouldn't be involved in political propaganda, which Ward says is inconsistent.

"The Olympics have always been garlanded in politics — when you get people together there's going to be politics. For them (to ask athletes) to say nothing doesn't make sense," Ward said.

"We stand by our athletes of all gender identities and expressions (and) orientation," said Ward, who wouldn't advocate a ban on the Games themselves in light of the years that athletes have invested in training.

Russia has assured the IOC the legislation would not apply to those visiting, attending and taking part in the Games.

A fashion designer who doesn't know how to sew?

That might be how he started, but local talent Sebastian Gaurin, 22, has come a long way since his first year in Fanshawe's fashion-design program.

Gaurin's one-of-a-kind, handmade pieces will be hitting the Club Lavish catwalk Friday night for a full fashion show.

His new collection, which he calls Sunkissed, is a cruise-themed line inspired by the summertime.

"I love seeing people wear the clothes that I've created. People really like to support local talent," he said.

While Gaurin noted that London doesn't have the most opportunities for fashion students, businesses like Passion 4 Beauty Jewelry and Wabi Sabi Hair Artistry were happy to collaborate on the

Honouring the memory of Jack Layton

Olivia Chow, right, looks on as Sarah Layton and her daughter Beatrice sit on a bronze statue of former NDP leader Jack Layton, after its unveiling at Toronto's ferry terminal on Thursday. Justin Trudeau: Yes, he inhaled

And he's not apologizing. Liberal leader says marijuana prohibition policy costs law enforcement $500 million a year

Justin Trudeau says, yes, he's inhaled a few times and, yes, he was already a member of Parliament the last time he did and, no, he has no regrets about it.

The Liberal leader laid out his past marijuana use in a lengthy interview and in an exchange with reporters Thursday in which he made no apologies.

He said he's smoked pot five or six times in his life — including three years ago during a backyard get-together — and never really liked it much.

Now that he's come clean about using pot, he said, he'd like to move on and talk about the hundreds of thousands of people who have a criminal record for it.

Trudeau sought to shift the focus onto his policy of legalizing marijuana when asked by reporters about his drug use and whether it had been a mistake.

"No, it wasn't a mistake," Trudeau told journalists in Quebec City.

"I've never tried other types of hard drugs. I am not a consumer of marijuana but, yes, I've already tried it. I used it — maybe five or six times in my life."

He said he believes public opinion has moved on and he's confident that Canadians will judge him less harshly than his political opponents.

What matters now, Trudeau said, is ending a marijuana prohibition policy that he says costs law enforcement $500 million a year and has left 475,000 people with criminal records since the Conservatives took office in 2006.

He has said that issue touched his own family.

Trudeau originally made the marijuana admission in a candid interview with the Huffington Post, in which he also revealed that his youngest brother, Michel, was charged with marijuana possession shortly before his 1998 death in an avalanche.

Rob Ford 'can't wait' to arm-wrestle the Hulkster

A little over the top?
Controversy-plagued Toronto mayor to take on his 'hero' Hulk Hogan in friendly match at city's Fan Expo

Toronto's mayor often takes on the media, but on Friday morning he'll face an even more intimidating opponent — his "hero," Hulk Hogan.

Rob Ford says he "can't wait" to arm-wrestle Hogan in a friendly event.

The legendary shirt-ripping wrestler will be in Toronto for Fan Expo, where he is set to hold an "uncensored" question-and-answer session on Friday evening.

But first, the 14-time wrestling champion will arm-wrestle Toronto's mayor, Ford's spokesman announced on Twitter.

'You're not going to die'. Alberta woman describes 12 days lost in woods

JEREMY NOLAÏS
Metro in Calgary

Her jaw was broken, her clothes were drenched and she was face-to-face with a bear. It was the night of July 14, the first of 12 the woman — whose name Metro is withholding because she is the victim of an alleged sexual assault — would spend lost in the bush in rural Alberta.

According to RCMP, the woman had been sexually assaulted hours before by a friend after the truck they were travelling in became stuck. It's alleged he punched her in the face, breaking her jaw, but she managed to escape.

Speaking for the first time since the incident on Thursday, the woman said she became disoriented after she was hurt. Then the rain started coming down.

"I found a den," she said. "I went inside and then a bear came. She smelled me up... I kept my eyes locked (on her), I didn't even want to blink."

The victim claims the bear then walked away but she continued to hear it nearby. By morning, it was gone.

But the ordeal was far from over — family members believe the woman trekked up to 30 kilometres over the next 12 days, sticking close to the river and feeding off berries that she foraged.

"I just kept telling myself, 'You're not going to die,'" she said.

The woman said her boyfriend is a fan of survival TV shows and she occasionally watches with him. Her father is also a hunter and had taught her some tricks about staying alive in the wilderness.

She made sure to keep her clothes dry but also hopped into the river from time to time to ride the current, a faster method of moving than by foot.

Finally, on July 26, the woman was found by an oil-field worker on a rural road, just four kilometres from a major highway. She was rushed to hospital and spent weeks recovering. Even now, her jaw is not healing properly and may require further surgery.

Still, she's just happy to be alive.

"I'll never forget the bear," she said, before adding, "I have got a second chance at life and am so grateful for that."

'I am Chelsea Manning.' WikiLeaks source wants to live life as a woman

Bradley Manning plans to live as a woman named Chelsea and wants to begin hormone therapy as soon as possible, the U.S. soldier said Thursday, a day after being sentenced to 35 years in prison for the biggest leak of classified material in U.S. history.

Manning announced the decision in a written statement provided to NBC, asking supporters to refer to her by her new name and the feminine pronoun. The statement was signed "Chelsea E. Manning."

"As I transition into this next phase of my life, I want everyone to know the real me. I am Chelsea Manning. I am a female. Given the way that I feel, and have felt since childhood, I want to begin hormone therapy as soon as possible," the statement read.

Manning's defence attorney David Coombs told NBC he is hoping officials at the military prison will accommodate Manning's request for hormone therapy. If not, "I'm going to do everything in my power to make sure they are forced to do so," Coombs said.

The army said it doesn't

Let UN team investigate alleged chemical-weapon attack: Chief

Syria. United Nations head calls on government to allow investigation into reports assault killed at least 100 people

Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Thursday called on the Syrian government to allow a UN team now in Damascus to swiftly investigate an alleged chemical-weapon attack outside the capital that killed at least 100 people.

UN deputy spokesman Eduardo del Buoy said Ban remains "deeply troubled" by the alleged attack on the eastern suburbs of Damascus on Wednesday and believes it needs to be investigated "without delay."

Syrian anti-government activists accused President Bashar Assad's regime of carrying out an attack using toxic gas and have reported death tolls ranging from 136 to 1,300. Even the lowest figure would make it the deadliest alleged chemical attack in Syria's two-and-a-half-year civil war.

The government has denied that it used chemical weapons, calling the allegations "absolutely baseless."

Del Buoy said the secretary-general "takes positive note" of the UN Security Council meeting Wednesday that backed his initial call for "a thorough, impartial and prompt investigation."

He said the secretary-general has been in touch with world leaders since Wednesday and is sending UN disarmament chief Angela Kane to Damascus to press for a UN investigation.

'Reaction of force' needed if chemicals used: Minister

France's foreign minister on Thursday raised the possibility of the international community using force in Syria if it is proven that Bashar Assad's regime used chemical weapons in an attack the opposition says killed more than 100 people.

Laurent Fabius, speaking on RMC radio, didn't make clear how the use of chemical weapons might be proven. But if there is proof of an attack by the regime, "we need a reaction by the international community ... a reaction of force," he said.

He excluded boots on the ground, "but a reaction that can take a form, I don't want to be more precise, of force."

Nigerian state fights Islamic sect

Using every resource from psychologists to agriculture experts and security forces, the Nigerian state at the heart of an Islamic uprising hopes to reach a reservoir of angry and rootless young men easily recruited by Islamic extremists and transform them into productive members of society.

"We are trying to look inward at what is the immediate cause and who are these people" in the Islamic sect, Boko Haram, that has morphed into a terrorist network, Zanna Mustapha, the deputy governor of Borno state, told The Associated Press.

Mustapha heads a high-ranking committee that is seeking to stem the root causes of extremism in Borno, one of three northeastern states under a three-month-old state of emergency.

One way to prevent further radicalization of the population is by "transforming" the lives of thousands of unemployed, restive young people

Ordinary residents of a typically poor neighbourhood — a warren of mud-brick buildings without running water or electricity — told a reporter that more than half the people living there before the military crackdown that began May 14 were members of Boko Haram.

disenchanted with life, the committee concluded.

"A hungry man is an angry man," Mustapha said. "The anger of youth in society has made it easy for whoever wants to recruit them," especially Boko Haram — the extremist group whose name means "Western education is forbidden" and which is blamed for the deaths of more than 1,700 people since 2010, according to a count by The Associated Press.

THE MAN WHO HACKED ZUCKERBERG

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News in London, U.K.

When an unemployed Palestinian programmer named Khalil Shreateh hacked into billionaire Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg's personal profile on the social network, the message he posted was respectful. "Dear Mark Zuckerberg," it began, "first sorry for breaking your privacy ..."

The 30-year-old from Hebron had discovered a glitch that allowed him to post on any wall on the network. Facebook usually provides $500 US rewards for identifying such a weakness, but did not pay out in Shreateh's case, saying that he had violated protocol. In stepped the ethical hacker community, and more than $12,000 US has been crowdsourced to reward the Palestinian, who was in a good mood when we spoke.

You could have written anything. Were you tempted to make the message spectacular?

No, because it was a serious vulnerability, but I was forced to write after Facebook ignored my first and second reports. I was frustrated.

Were you angry with Zuckerberg?

I admire Mark, and anyone who starts a project like that. Mark built Facebook in college, it did well, he got famous and everyone would want to be like him. I have a lot of respect.

Does this inspire you to hack more famous people and companies?

I will keep watching for new vulnerabilities and report them, as I have done many times before. I will not break anyone's privacy and hope that every hacker uses what they find the right way and not for the black market.

Is this type of hacking very popular where you're from? Will you inspire more of it?

I can't answer that because intelligence people will come after me (laughs). But many are doing this everywhere. I hope it will inspire not only in Palestine, as everybody needs these skills.

How have your friends and family reacted?

I want to say thanks to the hacker community for their donations, I really appreciate it. My family was worried I would be in jail and never have another job, but I thought I was helping people.

What are you planning to do with the money?

You cannot keep money in Palestine — I am very popular now. My family want me to get married, but I don't.

BORN IN CALGARY, ATLANTA ...

Some weeks you just have to shake your head.

1 Sarin insanity. France's foreign minister suspects that the Syrian regime has used sarin nerve gas on its own people at least once, and likely multiple times as the civil war has intensified. It's hard to even think about, never mind look at the heart-breaking pictures of little kids reportedly gassed to death. But look we must.

2 We were bored. Then there's the story out of Duncan, Okla., about three teenagers who allegedly decided to drive by someone and shoot him dead, just for fun. The unlucky random "target" was Chris Lane, a 22-year-old Australian who was out for a jog. Guns don't kill people; they just help the people who do kill people.

3 What a mother. Meanwhile, back in Canada, the grandmother of autistic teen Max Begley got an anonymous letter from a person who signed it "One pissed off mother," complaining about the noises Max makes and demanding that they move out of the neighbourhood or "euthanize him." Police refuse to consider the letter a hate crime, but a love note it ain't. There has been a gratifying outpouring of support for Max since the letter surfaced, but "pissed off mother" has so far eluded justice. She'll have to live with herself, and that can't be fun.

4 The prince of pot. In the same week we learned he'll be a father for the third time, Justin Trudeau, the heir apparent to the national throne, also said he last smoked pot three years ago. There was a time when that admission would have sent any politician's ambitions down in flames (or is that up in smoke?), but it only seems to increase the number of cool colours in his pretty aura.

5 I am NOT a Canadian. Ted Cruz, Texas Republican senator and the latest Tea Party Great Partially Hispanic Hope for President, has a birther problem. He was born in Calgary, which despite some reports, is not in the United States, and holds dual U.S.-Canadian citizenship. Obviously reluctant to invite comparisons to other Canadian politicians such as Justin Trudeau, Cruz has quickly renounced his Canadian citizenship. But if you're born in Calgary, you're one of us, eh?

6 Goodbye, Dickens of Detroit. Elmore Leonard, who apparently could only write bestsellers, including Get Shorty, which was made into a great movie starring Shorty, er, John Travolta, has died at 87. If I had a dog, I'd name it Elmore, even if it was a girl dog. His bark had plenty of bite.

Rare albinos named after Prince George

Three rare albino hedgehog babies, born on the same day as Britain's new prince, have moved into a miniature castle at a Moscow petting zoo.

George, Alexander and Louis are named after the Prince of Cambridge, who has those three names.

On Thursday, when the hedgehogs turned one month old, they were shown into their new home at the All-Russia Exhibition Centre.

It's a wooden castle with carefully carved windows, dark velvet curtains and a plush bed. A red carpet was rolled out to welcome the hedgehog family into the new home.

Zoo spokeswoman Yevgeniya Polonskaya said she hopes the Prince of Cambridge himself would one day visit the hedgehogs, and said they "have a couple of invitations set aside for him."

A strong female character is central in the eerie and disturbing You're Next. CONTRIBUTED

Be afraid, be very afraid, cuz You're Next!

Home-invasion horror. Lack of redeeming social values aside, this disturbing movie will have you peeking through your fingers

Richard: Mark, I don't know what it says about me, but I really liked You're Next. It's disturbing, violent and without any redeeming social value, but I enjoyed sitting in the theatre with my hands over my eyes, afraid of what I might see next. I'm not usually a fan of head trauma, but from what I saw as I peeked through my fingers, it worked well. You?

Mark: Richard, I found it one of the best movies of its type ever. Home invasion films are my kind of scary because it could — and does — happen. But I did find some redeeming social value in it. I thought it turned out to be a sly satire on family dynamics and materialism. Without revealing too many plot twists — and I loved them all — this movie starts as one thing and becomes something a little deeper. And, yes, I don't like to admit it, but I was scared through and through.

RC: It's hard to discuss without giving away a major plot twist, but I will say there is a Manson Family aspect to the story that really creeped me out. That and the anxiety-inducing John Carpenter style score throbbing in the background. It's all effective but it is the idea behind the movie that is truly disturbing.

MB: Let's not leave out the creepy animal masks! And I learned a lot from the movie, like how much can be accomplished with a two-by-four and a simple set of nails. In fact, I just got back from the hardware store. I'm ready!

RC: It is a lesson in survivalism to be sure, but keep in mind how it works out for everyone. I think I'll stick to calling 911. Lessons aside, I did like that while there are a number of hysterical characters here — who wouldn't be upset when your friends and family are being randomly murdered? — the hero, if you can use that word to describe someone who kills a person with a blender, is a woman. So often in these movies women are the scream queens while the men do the heavy lifting. Here, the only person with any self-preservation instincts is female.

MB: I think a blender is a perfect murder weapon for a woman — very Martha Stewart, in fact. Yes, this movie does have a strong woman at its centre, and it's set up nicely in the beginning, with the family sneering at her for her survivalist training.

Stars. Anna Friel, Imogen Poots

Paul Raymond became Britain's richest man by selling sex. As played by Steve Coogan, he's the impresario behind a series of sexy shows and nightclubs in London's Soho District; a flamboyant representation of Swingin' England. The movie examines his business interests — Live! Nude! Blue Jasmine

Director. Woody Allen

Stars. Cate Blanchett, Alec Baldwin

Woody Allen's latest film centres on the single most annoying character of any recent film. Jasmine (Cate Blanchett) is the widow of a Bernie Madoff type (Alec Baldwin) who is now out of money and options. Leaving NYC behind for a free place to stay with her sister (Sally Hawkins) in San Francisco, her self-centered, haughty attitude combined with her toxic past make it near impossible to build a future. Less a comedy in Allen's traditional vein, this is a character study brilliantly performed. The movie meanders somewhat, but expect an Oscar nomination for Blanchett. RICHARD CROUSE

The World's End

Director. Edgar Wright

Stars. Simon Pegg, Nick Frost, Martin Freeman

A teenage pub crawl with four mates was the highlight of Gary King's (Simon Pegg) life. Twenty years later an attempt to relive that past glory becomes less about nostalgia and more about survival when the locals are revealed to be robots. Entertaining and inventive, The World's End isn't as laugh-out-loud funny as the first two parts of director Edgar Wright's trilogy, Shaun of the Dead and Hot Fuzz, but its thematic core — the difficulty of growing up — makes it the most mature of his films. RICHARD CROUSE

Wong Kar Wai takes on the Grandmaster

China's past gets intense makeover.

Chinese director gives an action movie spin to the history of modern kung fu with The Grandmaster

NED EHRBAR

Metro World News in Hollywood

Chinese filmmaker Wong Kar Wai takes a fantastical look at the history of his nation through the lens of kung fu with The Grandmaster, about Yip Man (Tony Leung), the father of modern kung fu who eventually taught Bruce Lee. But first, according to the film, he had to wrestle with China's changing political climate and go through a lot of gorgeously staged fights.

This film is "inspired by a true story." How much historical accuracy did you go for?

It's quite accurate. The only thing I invented was the character of Gong Er (played by Zhang Ziyi). This is a fictional figure, it's not a real person. But in fact this character is based on several remarkable women at that time. When China was going through the changes from the monarchy to the republic, there were a lot of great men, and at the same time there were also remarkable women coming from all walks of life. Before then women were taking a much more minor role.

Tony Leung Chiu Wai stars in The Grandmaster. HANDOUT

The film examines how kung fu used to be incredibly exclusionary — solely an upper class pursuit.

In the traditional sense, martial arts were not for poor people. To practise martial arts you needed to be extremely wealthy because you couldn't do anything else. You had to practise — like, they had specific hours, like three o'clock in the morning and then three o'clock in the afternoon. Not too hot, not too cold. And then there are so many formalities. People visit you, you have to have a big party. When they leave, you have to send them with gifts. All these expenses, it's a big thing.

What does the Chinese film industry make of Hollywood films like Iron Man 3 participating more with the country's filmmaking world and audience? A welcome growth or a threat?

I always find it very silly to say, "As we are invaded by Hollywood" because we've been in this business for a long time. The only thing that's important is to keep the audience coming back to the cinema.

GLAAD study. Group finds that LGBT people still underrepresented on the big screen, TV is doing OK

We may be seeing more prominent gay and lesbian characters on TV shows, but the movie industry lags well behind the small screen, an advocacy group reports.

In its first study of LGBT roles in major studio releases, the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation found that compared with TV, where there has been a significant shift over the past decade, "major studios appear reluctant to include LGBT characters in significant roles or franchises."

In its report released Wednesday, GLAAD found that of the 101 releases from Hollywood's six major studios in 2012, just 14 included characters identified as lesbian, gay, or bisexual. Most were no more than cameos or minor roles, it said — and none of the films tracked had transgender characters.

"Until LGBT characters appear more regularly in these studio films, there will be the appearance of bias," said Wilson Cruz, GLAAD's national spokesperson, in an interview. He added that his organization will be meeting with studio executives to discuss the findings.

The report — called the 2013 Studio Responsibility Index — rates each of the six studios according to the number of LGBT-inclusive films they released. Faring worst: 20th Century Fox and Disney, which each receive "failing" grades; the other four — Paramount, Sony, Universal and Warner Bros. — receive grades of "adequate."

Asked in advance Tuesday afternoon about the report, the studios had no immediate comment.

As part of its index, the group developed criteria to measure the quality of the LGBT roles. They included: whether a character was identifiably LGBT; whether it was not solely or predominantly defined by its sexual orientation or gender identity; and whether it was tied into the plot in such a way that its removal would have a significant effect.

One of the best examples of an LGBT-inclusive film in 2012, according to GLAAD, was, interestingly, an animated family film: ParaNorman, about a misunderstood boy who can communicate with the ghosts of dead people.

In the film, which came from the Portland-based studio LAIKA, Norman's cheerleader sister asks the hunky football hero Mitch for a movie date. He casually makes a reference to his boyfriend.

The film's writer and co-director, Chris Butler, said the filmmakers, while determined to include the scene, had worried that it could cost them a PG rating and get them a PG-13 instead, which would have been inappropriate for the movie. In the end, they got their PG rating.

Butler said he was disappointed with some negative commentary about the scene — including one viewer's online review that praised the film for its anti-bullying message of inclusion — but said it ruined matters by making a character gay.

"I was surprised at all the fuss," Butler said. "But on the flip side was the positive reaction." The movie was the first animated film nominated for a GLAAD award.

As a filmmaker, Butler said he was not optimistic that there would be an inevitable wave of more onscreen LGBT characters as time goes on and society changes, as on TV.

"It's a mistake to assume it's inevitable," he said. "The only way to make change is to do something about it. It takes hard work."

"We are moving in the right direction," Butler said. "But not nearly quick enough. It's not enough."

Kane, at GLAAD, said the new report would help reinforce its longtime claims that Hollywood studios need to do more.

"Over the years we have met with studios, and it's always a point we make," Kane said. "Now, we have the numbers to take to them."

Diaz and Segel keep us all guessing in the Hamptons

While Cameron Diaz and Jason Segel did enjoy a dinner together in the Hamptons this week, apparently Life & Style magazine's claim that it was a date was a bit off-base. "Jason and Cameron were not romantic at all towards each other; very casual and friendly," a source tells E! News, adding that they were joined at upscale restaurant Nick & Toni's by another gentleman. The friends and Bad Teacher co-stars were also spotted shopping for groceries together earlier that day.

Brandy's ego bruised as she plays to empty stadium

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson

Poor Brandy. The singer performed to an empty, 90,000-capacity stadium last weekend in Johannesburg, South Africa, as part of the Mandela Sports & Culture Day. Due to poor publicity, the crowd left after the football and rugby matches, not realizing — or maybe they did? — that Brandy was set to perform. Per the tweet of @Kabomo, a South African musician,

"Brandy performed to an empty stadium. With the stadium lights on. She sulked after two songs and walked off." Which, you know, is more than I would have done. I would have looked out and hightailed it to a bar where I would then sit for the next 30 years of my life and think about how it all went wrong.

Lawsuit against Kanye in pipeline after he allegedly punched paparazzo

Kanye West is facing a lawsuit from a paparazzo over allegedly attacking him outside Los Angeles International Airport, according to TMZ. Plaintiff Daniel Ramos claims that "without warning or provocation," West "suddenly attacked, punching (the plaintiff) and attempting to wrestle the camera from" Ramos' hands, according to the filing. Ramos' attorney, Gloria Allred, claims that Ramos fell to his knees on the ground "with enough force that he sustained injuries to his right hip, as well as accompanying pain and emotional distress." He is seeking unspecified damages.

Hot dogs must hate hamburgers. Though they're the yin and yang of the home barbecue scene, take a step off your deck and gourmet burgers are selling for a premium at fancy boutique restos while dogs are relegated to the kids menu.

Not that hot dogs can't hold their own when it comes to haute cuisine. In my mind, the whole concept of a meal in an elongated bun was designed for getting creative with elaborate toppings (and I'm not just talking mustard, relish and ketchup).

Finding a wine that will stand strong against a barrage of eclectic flavours piled on top of a well-cooked wiener is a challenge worthy of The Amazing Race.

I like the versatility of the moscato grape. Originating in Italy, it's synonymous with a slightly sweet style of white wine that's become the darling of winemakers the world over.

Australians love it, and Jacob's Creek 2012 Moscato ($9.95 to $13.49) offers a lightly tropical mix of melon and pineapple that's a perfect foil for anything that will add a spicy, sharp, salty or sweet layer across your designer dog.

Keep it as cool as a cucumber

This recipe serves six. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Have you noticed how big and bold and robust salads have become? It's as though salads no longer can be content to be on the side and complement the rest of the meal.

Most recipes these days seem to insist the salad be the meal. Which can be nice, particularly in the heat of summer. But sometimes a salad needs to play another role. Sometimes it just needs to help us appreciate the other foods. That's where this Pressed Cucumber Salad with Sour Cream comes in.

1. Slice both cucumbers and the onion as thinly as possible, then mix them together in a large bowl. Sprinkle the salt over the vegetables.

Ingredients

- 2 large English cucumbers
- 1 small red onion
- 1 tsp salt
- 1/2 cup sour cream

2. Using your hands, gently knead and press the vegetables. Don't crush or mash them, just gently work the vegetables in the bowl.

3. After 2 to 4 minutes of kneading, there should be a large amount of water in the bowl. Pour off and discard the water.

4. Stir in the sour cream, dill, lemon zest and juice, garlic powder and black pepper. The salad can be made up to 4 hours in advance. If so, prepare the dressing separately and refrigerate in a separate container from the cucumbers. Just before serving, drain the cucumbers again, then mix in the dressing.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- 2 tbsp chopped fresh dill
- Zest and juice of 1/2 lemon
- 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 1/4 tsp ground black pepper

Side. Pickled Green Beans

1. In a medium saucepan over medium-high, combine the vinegar, sugar, salt, shallot, allspice, black pepper, red pepper flakes, mustard seeds and dill seeds. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes.

2. Add the green beans and simmer for another 5 minutes. Remove from the heat and allow to cool.

3. Once cooled, the green beans can be jarred (with some of the liquid) and refrigerated for up to 5 days.

Ingredients

- 3/4 cup white balsamic or cider vinegar
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 large shallot, sliced
- 1/2 tsp allspice
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper
- Pinch red pepper flakes
- 1 tsp yellow mustard seeds, lightly crushed
- 1/4 tsp dill seeds, lightly crushed
- 1 lb green beans, trimmed

Electrifying recruits could spark a Lightning 3-peat

Lightning general manager Taylor Brown is expecting big things from 25-year-old shooting guard Garrett Williamson. CONTRIBUTED

NBL Canada. Recently minted Canadian Williamson, American Baker expected to make an immediate impact

dave.langford@metronews.ca

So far, Lightning has struck twice in London.

Now, after the National Basketball League of Canada team's most recent signings, they could be well on their way to a third-straight league title.

And they may even have found a way to help Canada's national men's team along the way.

On Thursday, the Lightning announced they have come to terms with two shooting guards for the upcoming season, Garrett Williamson and Marquiz Baker.

Williamson, a six-foot-five shooting guard from Lower Merion, Pa., is a graduate of St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. He led the Hawks with 33 minutes played per game and averaged 12 points, four rebounds and four assists as a senior.

He was twice named to the Atlantic 10 all-defensive team. After graduating, he played a season in the NBA Developmental League for the Austin Toros. Most recently he played professional basketball in Germany.

But Williamson, 25, recently became a Canadian — his mother, Shelly, is a Canadian who hails from the Toronto area.

"When speaking with Garrett's agent, Steve Mountain, we uncovered the fact that Garrett recently acquired his Canadian citizenship," Lightning general manager Taylor Brown said Thursday.

"Steve wasn't aware that we require a minimum of three Canadians on our roster so we offered Garrett a contract on the spot."

Brown said Canada Basketball officials, including new general manager Steve Nash and head coach Jay Triano, will be pleasantly surprised.

"Once Canada basketball finds out about Garrett's citizenship, I would assume he would eventually be a candidate for the national team," Brown said.

"That was pretty well one of the main reasons I wanted to come to London," Williamson said of his national-team prospects in a phone interview. "Also, (the Lightning) have a winning culture, a winning team. That appeals to me a lot."

Williamson said his strong suit is defence. "But I have been trying to expand my game."

Brown said one of the Light-ning's major goals is to have three Canadians on the roster who can play "legitimate minutes."

His other new addition, Baker, is a six-foot-two guard from Houston and a recent graduate of Alcorn State University, near Lorman, Miss. He averaged 16 points and four rebounds per game as a senior and led the team with 35 minutes per game.

"Baker has a great work ethic and was a top-three scorer in the Southwestern Athletic Conference," Brown said.

Training camp begins Oct. 7, and the regular season begins in Windsor on Nov. 1. The first home game is the following night against the Mississauga Power. Game time is 7 p.m.

Getting the deal done

Agent Steve Mountain was introduced to Williamson by his friend, Orlando Magic point guard Jameer Nelson. He also represents ESPN analyst Stephen A. Smith and several NHL players.

• "Everything our research has shown is that they (the Lightning) make a total effort to do everything right," Mountain said.

• GM Taylor Brown said there will be more major player announcements coming soon.

Max Domi Knighted London MVP

OHL. 2013 NHL pick, teammates awarded well-deserved honours for winning season

DAVE LANGFORD
dave.langford@metronews.ca

Max Domi's hockey career is far from over, but you had a sense Thursday he will never forget his days with the London Knights.

Domi, a 2013 NHL first-round pick by the Phoenix Coyotes, is an even-money choice to make the Coyotes this year or return to the Ontario Hockey League Knights for a final season.

But that's tomorrow. Thursday was the Knights' awards ceremony and championship-ring presentation — rings they earned by winning the OHL title last year and their second-straight trip to the Memorial Cup.

And Domi was named the team MVP, not an easy choice from a group that also featured captain Scott Harrington, top playoff performer Bo Horvat and goal-scoring star Seth Griffith.

"It takes a lot of most valuable players on a team to win a championship," Knights general manager Mark Hunter said, "and I really believe we had a lot. It was hard to pick. There was no right answer."

Nobody was second-guessing the choice.

"Max is a great player and he's only going to get better. He entertains fans.... He brings people into the seats on a regular basis."

Domi was clearly enjoying the evening with his friends reunited, many going to this year's camp and some who have graduated and will go elsewhere.

"It's amazing both years. We were all brothers," Domi said with a wide grin. "It's a bunch of best buddies having fun every day and playing hockey."

Domi said there are some good reasons why they have been successful the past two seasons.

"Full of a lot of talent and a lot of character as well," he said. "Every guy on that team wanted to win a championship and ... managed to figure it out."

"Hunts (GM Mark and head coach Dale Hunter) did a great job of (bringing) them all together. Every one is an MVP. We all push each other and we had fun."

Yankees continue to dominate Jays

Andy Pettitte pitched six effective innings, Curtis Granderson homered, and the New York Yankees beat Toronto 5-3 on Thursday after a 3 1/2-hour rain delay for their 10th straight victory against the Blue Jays.

Eduardo Nunez hit a two-run single, and the surging Yankees took advantage of a missed call to win their fifth consecutive game and 10th in 12 overall. New York improved to 12-1 against Toronto this season with its second four-game sweep of the Blue Jays. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Verlander off the hook in Tigers loss

Detroit Tigers ace Justin Verlander benefited from a four-run rally that got him off the hook for what would have been his first loss to the Twins since April 2010.

However, that didn't brighten his mood because an eighth-inning run was enough to give the Twins a 7-6 win over his Tigers.

Olympic hockey. High insurance costs keeping Canadian team off the ice

Steve Yzerman would prefer to get Canada's players on the ice at the upcoming orientation camp for the Olympic men's hockey team.

But the price tag to insure players against injury is too high for Hockey Canada, so the four-day camp starting Sunday in Calgary will consist of informational meetings about the Games in Sochi, Russia, and fostering team chemistry off the ice.

"Not going on the ice isn't the end of the world," says Yzerman, the executive director of the national men's team. "There's a lot of other things that need to be done in preparation, logistically going through how we're going to get there, where we'll stay ... drug-testing policy, a lot of informational things we need to go through and get out of the way..."

Forty-seven players are scheduled to arrive in Calgary on Sunday and head to Hockey Canada's headquarters at Canada Olympic Park on the city's west side. Canada can take three goaltenders and 22 skaters to Sochi.

Players invited to the same orientation camp in the summer of 2009 skated daily and finished with an intra-squad game that drew a sellout crowd to the Scotiabank Saddledome.

It's up to each country's federation to insure NHL players against injury at summer camps.

Hockey Canada president Bob Nicholson has said that would cost more than $1 million for the invited 47, whose combined 2013-14 salaries total $259 million, according to capgeek.com.

USA Hockey has also decided against an on-ice component to its men's camp in Arlington, Va. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

A colleague may be a bit pushy today and your first instinct will be to push back. Don't. It will be counter-productive, not least because they have more power than you. Stay calm and fit in with their needs.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Are you working too hard? According to the planets you are and the best thing you can do today is take an hour off from your schedule to review what you are trying to achieve.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

This should be a wonderful time for you and if it isn't, it soon will be. A few days from now, your world will be turned on its head and you'll be standing the right way up!

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Family issues will take up a lot of your time today and the sooner you deal with them, the sooner you will be free to do your own thing. Loved ones won't be as difficult to talk to as you appear to believe.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You need to get out more. Short trips will be especially beneficial today and over the weekend. You may encounter one or two less than friendly people but you will meet many more who delight you.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Mercury, your ruler, joins the Sun in your sign today, making this potentially one of the best long weekends of the year. Personally and professionally you'll soon be moving ahead.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The thing you fear most is the thing you should be doing the most. That may not be what you want to hear but there it is. Once you take that first step, the rest will come easy.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You sometimes expect too much of yourself and then feel depressed when your efforts fall short. If so you feel that now, lower your expectations and learn to live with who you are.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

If you get the chance to join forces with like-minded people today, take it. Yes, you may have to give up some freedom but in return you'll get the opportunity to change the world.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

With Mercury, planet of the mind, joining the Sun in one of the best areas of your chart, you have a clear idea what it is you want to accomplish — and the personal and professional tools to make it happen.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The planets urge you to think the unthinkable today. But keep in mind that thinking and doing do not always go together at the same time. The more you think now, the more success you will enjoy later.

♓ Pisces

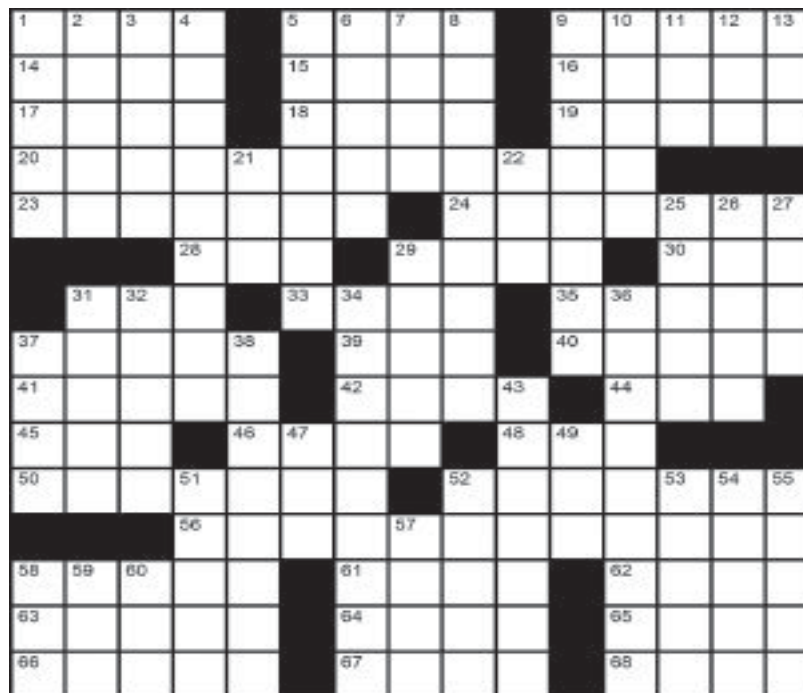

Feb. 20 - March 20

You like to see the best in people but the planets warn that today you should operate on the assumption that no one is on your side. It may not be true but you cannot afford to take chances. SALLY BROMPTON
